Jeremy and Melissa Oster realized their long-time dream in 2002, opening a contemporarily designed watch boutique in the heart of Denver, Colorado. Oster Jewelers is a 1,000-square-foot fresh and inviting space, with natural light streaming through many windows to highlight the exceptional timepieces for which the jeweler is celebrated. "The concept was to present a redefined image of luxury, and move away from the look of a traditional jewelry store," shares Jeremy. "We want it to be more like a place to come and hang out; luxury without pretense."

Friends and customers of Oster Jewelers can certainly "hang out" in good company, as the store boasts rare and prestigious timepieces, a "who's who" of the industry, featuring Audemars Piguet, Breguet, Parmigiani, Ulysse Nardin, and more. Oster Jewelers also specializes in boutique brands, such as Urwerk, Vogard, Bovet, and Jaquet Droz, a perfect complement to pieces from larger watch houses. "We offer a grand variety of brands, price points, and aesthetics. There is always something new and we are very fortunate to carry so many brands that are incredibly respected and sought-after," adds Melissa.

In addition to the varied selection of timepieces, Oster's showcases boast a stunning selection of jewelry, with unique designs predominantly by Italian jewelers and leading American designers: Dominique Cohen, Jamie Wolf, La Nouvelle Bague, Tanagro, and Valente. The Denver-based retailer also offers an extensive collection of watch winders, with models by Scatola del Tempo and Kubik, and pens and accessories by Dunhill.

Though the vintage market is not their primary focus, Oster Jewelers will sell pre-owned pieces if they match the level of esteem represented throughout the store. Jeremy says proudly, "Our collection of new watches is so strong that we tend to see our customers wanting the newest and most sought-after pieces. However, we do take trade-ins, and as a result have found many vintage treasures throughout the years."

Oster Jewelers is recognized far beyond the Denver community for their incredible selection and true dedication to individualized service and care. Jeremy illustrates with a unique account. "We recently sold a watch to a very nice chap who contacted us from Nigeria. Quite interesting and surprising! He learned of us through a variety of watch articles found on the Internet, and trusted that we could assist him in finding a special piece. He selected a stunning Bovet Retrograde Perpetual Calendar and is extremely pleased."

Jeremy notes some interesting developments witnessed through nearly 20 years in the watch industry. "The demand for fine timepieces has reached a peak in the United States, with great competition among retailers to secure important pieces for our clients. Therefore, the relationship between the customer and his or her authorized dealer is more important today than ever before. The savvy customer knows that loyalty on his or her part pays dividends when it comes to having access to the newest, and often limited-edition, timepieces, as they become increasingly harder to locate."

Over the past five years, Jeremy and Melissa Oster have worked hard to build unique relationships with both their customers and community, supporting many philanthropic and civic groups along the way. "We are extremely involved in Morgan Adams Concours D'Elegance, which benefits pediatric cancer research and treatment. The Adoption Exchange and National Repertory Orchestra are also extremely important to us," remarks Melissa, Jeremy adding, "We happily offer donations to several other wonderful and worthwhile charitable organizations, making many friends through our efforts, and allowing us to become an important part of our community."
