“My mother says I didn’t open my eyes for eight days after I was born, but when I did, the first thing I saw was an engagement ring. I was hooked.”

Elizabeth Taylor

That hair, those lips, those violet eyes! Though she began her film career in the '40s, by the time the '60s rolled around, Elizabeth Taylor was Hollywood's queen.

During that decade she made Butterfield 8, Cleopatra and Who's Afraid of Virginia

Wolf? She also married Richard Burton, her fifth and sixth husband, for the first time.

Besides entertaining us with her impressive acting chops and elegantly dramatic fashion sense, Taylor also taught us, in her own words, that “big girls need big diamonds.”

To make your new-year ensemble sparkle, a la Liz, let jewelry be your friend. A glitzy diamond necklace makes it clear that you're the lead, while a giant ring and chic bracelet play splendid co-stars.

COVER STORY

"I think the most important thing a woman can have — next to talent, of course, — is her hairdresser."

Joan Crawford

Her adopted daughter Christina's tell-all tale Mommie Dearest, might have shown her as violent and vicious ("No more wire hangers! Ever!"), but as far as Hollywood stardom goes, Joan Crawford was at the top of the A-list.

The actress, who won an Oscar for 1945's Mildred Pierce, always dressed to impress. "I never go out unless I look like Joan Crawford the movie star," she once said. "If you want to see the girl next door, go next door." Want to look like her? Wear a chic suit, ruby red lips and don't forget to pencil in those heavy eyebrows.

"Love means never having to say you're sorry."

Ali MacGraw in Love Story

As soon as Love Story hit theaters, Ali MacGraw's style became an instant craze.

Long, straight hair, a knit stocking cap and little to no makeup was a signature style in the '70s, and continues to thrive today. If you're no-nonsense when it comes to fashion, keep your clothes simple and consider a great piece of jewelry. A bold necklace and hoop earrings make great statements on their own.

"My look is attainable. Women can look like Audrey Hepburn by flipping out their hair, buying the large sunglasses, and the little sleeveless dresses."

Audrey Hepburn

Ask a style maven to name her favorite flick and you're likely to hear Breakfast at Tiffany's. Audrey Hepburn's 1961 turn as Holly Golightly cemented the little black dress as a wardrobe staple in any woman's closet. Hepburn showed that a simple black sheath can look elegant, sexy and sophisticated. Pair your dress with great earrings and an elegant updo and imagine yourself bustling through New York City. "I don't want to own anything until I find a place where me and things go together," Holly says in the film. "I'm not sure where that is, but I know what it's like. It's like Tiffany's."
